1 - Baby-sitter  Hero Images/Hero Images/Getty Images	A babysitter is a person who watches over someone else's children. Babysitting is a very good job for teenagers because the hours are flexible and almost everyone in the neighborhood will need a babysitter at some point. All you have to do is offer your services, and someone will accept them.
2 - Newspaper delivery  Rocko and Betty	Even with the internet being as popular as it is, people still love reading an old-fashioned newspaper. A delivery person is someone who brings the newspapers to the customer's front door. The hours are very early in the morning, but the pay is decent. The frequency of the job will depend on the newspaper, is it a daily or weekly paper?
3 - Mowing and yard work  Pixel Pig/Getty Images	In addition to mowing the lawn in the summer, there are plenty of activities that homeowners may need assistance with throughout the year. Teens can explore tasks such as shoveling snow, raking leaves, and planting flowers depending on the season. The jobs can be done alone or together with the homeowner.
4 - Life Guard  Fat Camera/Getty Images	A lifeguard is someone who watches other people swim. This person also protects the swimmers if anything happens. This job is usually easy to obtain since pools need many lifeguards during the summer. However, you must have training in CPR and first aid to meet the hiring criteria.

5 - Dog walker  <small>Hero Images/Getty Images</small>	Dogs need to get out for exercise all year long, so dog walking is a great job for teenagers. Make sure that you feel comfortable with the pet before you take the animal for a walk the first time. In addition to dog walking, you can also offer to pet sit for the animals while the owners are away on vacation.
6 - Grocery store bagger  <small>Paul Taylor/The Image Bank/Getty Images</small>	Grocery stores are always looking for teenagers to serve as cashiers and baggers. Most grocery stores will want you to work during the school year after school as a weekend job.
7 - Car Washer  <small>101 Cats/Getty Images</small>	Running a car wash is extremely flexible. As a teenager, you can choose the hours that you would like to work and only schedule the car wash during those times. A car wash comes with a great deal of responsibility, as you must be sure not to accidentally scratch or dent someone else's car.
8 - Fast food server  <small>YinYang/E+/Getty Images</small>	Many teens can find starter positions in fast food restaurants based on the minimum age to work in each state. These establishments will usually hire people who do not have any experience. To work well in this position, you have to love working with people at a fast pace. Most fast food restaurants expect the servers to be very quick and work well under pressure.
9 - Ride operator  <small>Mario Gutierrez/Getty Images</small>	An amusement park is a perfect place for a teen to work. The environment is fun, the people are friendly, and the perks are appealing. If you are looking for an exciting new position, you can apply to work as a ride operator. It is a position for a person who is very detail oriented and takes safety very seriously.
